

Colombina – vivacious young servant to Doña Sirena, her sense of romance is paired with cleverness

Colombina has been sent to see the servant, CRISPIN. She reports on the activities of the lover, SYLVIA.

COLUMBINA: I've been sent by Doña Sirena to get news of your master. Scarcely had the day dawned when Sylvia came to our house and reported all the events to my mistress. She says she won't go back to her father's house, or leave my mistress's house except as the bride or Lord Leandro. [...] Sylvia believes that Leandro is wounded...From her balcony she heard the clashing of swords and your shouts for help. Then she fainted away, and she was found in that condition of daybreak. Tell me how Lord Leandro is doing, because she's dying of worry until she hears something, and my mistress is anxious as well.
