

Side for COLOMBINA

Colombina, servant to Doña Sirena, has been sent to, CRISPÍN for news of his master, Leandro. However, Colombina is most anxious to report her news about Leandro's lover, Silvia. Note: A reader will read Crispín and Arlequín.

Colombina: Doña Sirena sends me for news of Leandro. Scarcely was it daybreak, when Silvia came to our house and told my mistress all that had happened. She says she won't return to her father's house, nor will she leave my mistress's house except to be Señor Leandro's wife.

Crispín: She says that? Oh worthy youth! Oh loving heart!

Arlequín: What an epithalium I will compose for their wedding!

Colombina: Silvia believes that Leandro is gravely wounded ... From her balcony she heard the clash of weapons, your shouts for help. Then she fell unconscious, and that's how she was found at dawn. Give me news of Señor Leandro, for she's dying of anguish waiting to know, and my mistress is also worried.
